

It's a fine little mess, but for once the man in the bleachers doesn't have to worry.

Larry McLean, Giant catcher, has been cured of white hope aspirations. Larry got in a money argument with his theatrical manager in a New York saloon, and Cy Seymour, former big league outfielder, aided with the manager. McLean was handed a damaged face, and pleaded with bystanders to pull Seymour off.

All of Larry's batting isn't confined to the world's series.

Federal League representatives have made a tempting offer to Pat Ragan, Brooklyn pitcher. Ragan says the offer is better than the terms of Brooklyn and he may jump.
